Your guide to Aged Care

For most of us, growing older means at some stage we will find it difficult to manage our day to day living activities. You may feel you need help, or you may care for a friend or family member who needs help, but you don't know where to start or what assistance you can access.

There are many different types of aged care services available to support you, whatever your needs, including Residential Aged Care.

Residential Aged Care Facilities

Sometimes, the best way to receive help and support can be by living in a residential aged care facility, either permanently or for a short stay (called residential respite). You will need to be assessed and approved for residential aged care by the Aged Care Assessment Team (ACAT).

Fees and charges

A resident can be asked to pay the following fees:

The Basic Daily Care Fee applies to all residents of an aged care facility. It is set at 85% of the single rate of the maximum age pension (excluding the Pension and the Energy Supplements) currently $52.25 per day.

Accommodation Payments are subject to a market price model and aged care facilities are required to publish the market price of their accommodation payments in their brochures, their websites and on the My Aged Care government website (www.myagedcare.gov.au).

A market price Refundable Accommodation Deposit (RAD) in excess of $550,000 will need to be approved by the Aged Care Pricing Commissioner.

The calculation of the Daily Accommodation Payment (DAP) is based on the Refundable Accommodation Deposit (RAD) amount and a government set interest rate which is currently 4.89% per annum.

For example, if the market price RAD was $400,000, the DAP would be $53.58 per day. Of course you may decide to pay $200,000 by RAD and $200,000 by DAP in which case the DAP would be $26.79 per day. Any amount of RAD you pay will be an exempt asset for the calculation of your pension entitlement. However, payment of a RAD will be included in the asset calculation for Aged Care fees and costs.

Residents of an aged care facility will be assessed by the government based on their assets and income to determine their capacity to pay a Means Tested Care Fee (subject to an annual and lifetime cap).

The formula that is applied is:

- 50¢ per dollar of income above $27,736.80 p.a. (single), $27,216.80 p.a. each (couple)
- Plus 17.5% of assets between $50,500 – $171,535.20
- Plus 1% of assets between $171,535.20 – $413,605.60
- Plus 2% of assets above $413,605.60
- Divide the sum of the above amounts by 364
- Minus the accommodation supplement of $58.19 per day

Income is generally assessed under the same rules that Centrelink applies for pension entitlements. Assets both within Australia and overseas are assessed at net market value. If you are a member of a couple your assets and income will be assessed on a 50/50 basis. The former family home will be assessed up to a value of $171,535.20 per person (indexed) unless a protected person is living there, in which case the home will be exempt from the assessment (conditions apply).

A protected person includes:

1. A spouse or dependent child, or
2. A carer, who is eligible to receive an Australian Income Support Payment, who has been living there for at least 2 years, or
3. A close relative, who is eligible to receive an Australian Income Support Payment, who has been living there for at least 5 years

Additional Service Fees are other amounts agreed between the resident and the aged care facility.

Low Means Aged Care Residents

A common misconception about moving into an aged care facility is that you will not get in if you do not have enough money.

In reality, most aged care facilities need to keep a ratio of people who have lower financial means to receive funding from the government, the exception is extra services facilities.

→ Your eligibility to have some (or all) of your accommodation costs subsidised by the government is based upon your assets and income. People with assets below $50,500 and income below $27,736.80 p.a. (single) or $27,216.80 p.a. each (couple) will not be required to make a contribution towards their accommodation costs. They will be considered a Low Means Resident and will only pay the Basic Daily Care Fee.

People with assets above $50,500 or income above $27,736.80 p.a (single) or $27,216.80 each p.a. (couple) may be eligible for partial government support towards their accommodation costs should their means tested assessment be less than $58.19 per day. Your residential care fees are reviewed on a quarterly basis and are subject to change.

Tom's example

For example, Tom is single with assessable income of $29,000 pa and assets of $90,000. He would have the ability to contribute as follows:

- The income contribution at 50¢ for each dollar above $27,736.80 / 364 = $1.74 per day
- The asset contribution at 17.5% of assets above $50,500 / 364 = $18.99 per day

In addition to the basic daily care fee of $52.25 per day, Tom's accommodation contribution would be $20.73 per day.

How can Aged Care financial advice help?

Aged Care decisions are complex and specialist advice is needed. The correct structuring of your assets and income can ensure you maximise your pension entitlement, minimise the ongoing cost of aged care and have your estate planning wishes met.

Maureen's example

The example of Maureen below shows how seeking financial advice before making any aged care decisions can assist in significantly improving your final outcome.

Maureen is age 80, widowed and recently entered a residential aged care facility. Her assets comprise of the family home valued at $400,000 and $230,000 in her bank account (earning 1.5% p.a.). Maureen currently receives a Centrelink Age Pension of $944.30 per fortnight which is equal to the maximum amount payable.

The facility requires a Refundable Accommodation Deposit (RAD) of $300,000. Maureen does not believe she has any other option except to sell her family home of 50 years to pay for the RAD. She retains the residual in her bank account.

Under this 'sell the family home' scenario, Maureen would be required to pay the basic daily care fee of $52.25 per day plus a means tested care fee of $19.82 per day. Her Centrelink Age Pension benefits would reduce to $908.43 per fortnight.

As an alternative scenario, Maureen could keep and rent her family home. She has been advised that the net rental income would be $10,000 per annum. Maureen could use $200,000 from her bank account to pay part of the RAD and the remaining $100,000 to be paid as a Daily Accommodation Payment (DAP) of $13.40 per day.

In this 'keep and rent the family home' scenario, Maureen would be required to pay the basic daily care fee of $52.25 per day, a means tested care fee of $10.13 per day and a DAP of $13.40 per day. Her Centrelink Age Pension would reduce to $837.55 per fortnight, however Maureen would also be receiving rental income, resulting in an overall improvement in her cashflow of $2,304 in the first year.
